Mayor Leclerc appointed to Connecticut Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations

(March 15, 2016) East Hartford, CT – Governor Dannel P. Malloy has appointed Mayor Marcia Leclerc to serve on the Connecticut Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. Mayor Leclerc will serve as a representative of towns with a population of 20,000 to 60,000 until March of 2018.

“I am honored to serve on the Connecticut Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations,” said Mayor Leclerc. “The Commission does important work improving and strengthening relationships between state and local governments, as well as the communities they serve. I am humbled that the Governor chose me for this position.”

The Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations (ACIR) is a 24-member agency of the State of Connecticut, which works on system issues between state and local governments. The agency serves as a forum for consultation between state and local officials, conducts research and encourages studies on intergovernmental issues, and engages in policy development at all levels of government. The ACIR was established in 1985.
